Pretty Good Carpenters.

London has been having an exhibition of tree-felling at the Hippodrome, by the two champion axmen of Australia, one of whom cut through a blue gum tree of 63 inches in 1 minute and 11 seconds. He also sawed through a tree 76 inches in circumference in 2 minutes and 12 seconds, and conjointly with his companion won the double-handed saw championship by sawing through a 76-inch tree in 42 seconds. How do these records look to the lumber camps of America?

Held To Juvenile Court.

Ellis Winkler, a seventeen-year-old boy residing at North Middletown, this county, was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. C. W. Webster of the same place, charging him with the destruction of her poultry.

Winkler, who was much frightened, was taken before Judge Dundon, and released upon his own recognizance in the sum of $200. The case will come before the Juvenile court for trial.

Twenty-Five Years Ago.

In Woodford county, twenty-five years ago this week, ninety-one head of shorthorns, the property of A. J. Alexander, Combs & Vanmeter, were sold to Woodburn for $36,530. Mr. Alexander priced a sucking filly, full sister to Maud S., to Robert Bonner, of New York, at $15,000.

Ices Served.

The Junior Aid Society of the Baptist Church will serve ices in Miss Jennie Kenney's yard, from 4 to 10 p. m., every Tuesday. Prices will be 5 cents per plate.

Increased Salaries Recommended.

Increased salaries for teachers were recommended by the Kentucky Education Association in session at Winchester, after it was shown that the average salary now is less than that paid section hands on railroads. The association declared in favor of votes for women on school questions and adjourned to meet next year in Frankfort.

Ice Cold.

We sell the genuine Coca-Cola. On ice at all times. JAMES E. CRAVEN.

Swiss Labor Coming.

The State Board of Agriculture Friday made a contract for a survey of the forests of Kentucky, to be begun at once, and also contracted with a native of Switzerland to go to that country and secure the right kind of families to come to Kentucky and make their homes. The forest survey will show, on a map of the state, the location and character of the forests and the quantity and value of standing timber. The immigrants will supply the great demand for farm hands, and it is expected that many of the best type will be secured.

Parisian's Narrow Escape.

A dispatch from Mt. Sterling says: "Mr. Charles Wilmott, a Paris dry goods drummer, had a narrow escape near Howards Mill. The horse he was driving stalled on a long hill and running backward, overturned the wagon and trunks. Mr. Wilmott had his leg badly bruised, but by miraculous movements, the heavy trunks did not touch him. A negro driver with Mr. Wilmott was thrown into the fence but uninjured."

Capt. Bruce Dies.

Capt. J. H. Bruce, aged 84, died at his home in San Francisco Sunday, June 16, of general debility. He is survived by his wife and two sons and one daughter, the latter being Mrs. Stephens, wife of Dr. Barclay Stephens, formerly of Paris, a son of Mr. Chas. Stephens. Dr. and Mrs. Stephens were recently visiting in Paris and were called home by the critical illness of Capt. Bruce, who had been an invalid for more than a year.

Policeman Kills Negro.

Policeman John Ballard, of Winchester, early Sunday morning shot and instantly killed Low Mason, colored, and wounded Rob Mack and Bev. Morris, both colored in the restaurant of D. Rash in Pucktown, a colored portion of Winchester.

Noted Mason Dead.

The funeral of R. R. Russell, Grand Senior Deacon of the Grand Lodge of Masons of Kentucky, were held Sunday afternoon at Carlisle, and he was buried with grand honors. As Mr. Russell was widely connected and as a prominent secret order man his funeral was one of the largest and most impressive ever witnessed in that city. An electric storm came up shortly before the funeral services. Notwithstanding this, hundreds of citizens of Nicholas County and other cities near Carlisle were present at the cemetery to pay their last tribute of respect to the noted Mason.

Kentucky Mountaineers Seek New Home.

Thirty residents of Lee, Powell and Estill counties, with their families, passed through here last week en route to Escanaba, Mich., where they go to secure employment as wood choppers. The party was in charge of Frank Scott, who secured the men and who has taken several gangs to the same section. One of the party said to a press representative that they could get better wages in Michigan than in Kentucky, being offered $1 to cord for cutting wood. As one man can cut from two to three cords a day this means from $2 to $3 a day. Escanaba, their destination, is about 200 miles north of Chicago, on Lake Michigan. The party included a number of women and children. It is estimated that about seven hundred people have left Breathitt, Lee, Estill and Powell counties during the past twelve months for homes in the newer States of the Northwest.

Ready Now.

Rogers Clark is ready to hang your paper at once; call him over phone and have him call and see you, and get his prices; he guarantees all work. 25-2t

A Sad Death.

There was a sad death in Ludlow, Saturday about noon, which has completely distracted Harry Clare, aged 10.

Harry and his brother, Clifford Clare, aged 8, were playing baseball Thursday afternoon. The latter was catching and the other brother at the bat. In striking at a thrown ball the bat in some manner or other slipped from Harry's hands struck Clifford over the temple. He staggered and fell unconscious. Several physicians revived the boy, and at the time did not think him serious. However, Saturday he became unconscious and expired.

Suits For $152,500.

In the Fleming Circuit Court last week, four damage suits of a total of $56,500 were filed against the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, and the Cincinnati, Fleming and South-eastern Railroad Company. The suits which are the outcome of the wreck on the latter road on May 10, were filed by Nannie B. Rankin for $30,050, C. B. Rankin for $10,250, same for Elsie Rankin $5,250, and Mrs. Sallie K. Graham for $10,500. These suits make a grand total of $152,500, which the road is asked to pay victims of the wreck. The plaintiffs contend that the C. F. and S. E. railroad is owned by the Louisville and Nashville Company, and that they are liable.

Bourbon Circuit Court.

The following has transpired in the Bourbon Circuit Court since our last edition:

In the case of Geo. B. Mosely & Co. vs. W. W. Shropshire the jury found for the plaintiffs in full amount sued for, $425. This was for commission on sale of farm. Judge Dundon represented plaintiffs and McMillan & Talbott defendants.

The case of James and Edgar Soules vs. R. P. Barnett resulted in a verdict for plaintiffs in sum of $122.50. This suit was for damages for the death of a colt, the plaintiff claiming that death was caused from a kick from the defendant's old family horse. This was the third trial of the case, both former juries unable to agree. Plaintiffs were represented by Judge Denis Dundon and the defendant by Hon. E. M. Dickson.

The damage suit of Sam Jett vs. A. H. Hargis, which came to this county from Clark Circuit Court, was by agreement of attorneys continued until the November term.

Judge Stout sustained the demurrers in the case of J. D. McClintock vs. R. M. Harris, H. C. Howard, S. S. Clay, W. T. Talbott and A. J. Fee.

The plaintiff was represented by Judge Dundon and the defendants by McMillan and Talbott, E. M. Dickson and Judge Howard.

The defendants, at the time J. D. McClintock, the plaintiff, was an applicant for postmaster to succeed J. S. Sweeney, filed affidavits with postmaster general at Washington in which they alleged that the political record of the plaintiff was vulnerable. A copy of these affidavits were later introduced before the Republican County Committee, and were the basis of the resolutions which attempted to read the plaintiff out of the Republican party, resulting in suits for damages in the sum of $25,000 against the seven members of the county committee who voted in the affirmative, McClintock securing a verdict at March term of $1,500 against each of them.

Later McClintock sued the author of the affidavits in the same amount and it is in the cases that the court sustains the demurrers.

The court held that the alleged charges in the affidavit had never been published and therefore McClintock's petitions had no standing in court.

The court was occupied yesterday in trial of case of Martha Small vs. Blue Grass Traction Company. This is another damage suit. The plaintiff alleging she received injuries from being thrown from the car that had the electric explosion on last day of Bourbon Fair in 1906.

Plaintiff is represented by Judge Stitt and E. M. Dickson and defendant by Morton & Webb, of Lexington, and McMillan & Talbott, of this city.

She's A Wonder.

Mr. C. M. Dedman, of Mercer county, has a wonderful two-year-old Jersey heifer. In 21 milkings she gave 354 pounds of rich milk, which is over sixteen and nine-tenths pounds at each milking, or an average of 4 gallons and a quart daily. On Tuesday last she gave 37 pounds of milk, or 4 gallons and 5 pints. This is equal to the record of the very finest animals that can sell at fabulous prices. If anyone in Bourbon county can beat this we want to hear from them.

The Best Laundry.

Ask the fastidious dresser and he will tell you the work of the Bourbon Steam Laundry is the kind that pleases. 18-4t

Tobacco Sales.

Wm. McCray, of North Middletown, bought of R. P. Collins, of near Millersburg, 12,000 pounds of tobacco at 10¢ cents.

Abnee & Musson sold five hogs-head of tobacco on the Cincinnati market, Thursday, at $8.40 to $10 per hundred pounds, or an average of $9.30.

To keep cool, buy a Gas Stove.

Competitive Examination.

On Thursday, Superintendent McChesney will hold a competitive examination at his office for admission by county certificate to State College for the ensuing year. On Friday and Saturday, June 28 and 29, examinations will be conducted before the Superintendent for teachers for the colored schools of the county.

Garden Truck Plentiful.

The garden truck and the home-grown vegetables are becoming plentiful on the local market. Peas are in abundance, and new potatoes are coming in in large quantities. There are also plenty of beets, but it will be some time yet before there are home grown beans and other small vegetables. These growing vegetables however look in the pink of condition, and if the weather continues favorable there will be no lack of vegetables on the market in a few days.

Might Be Worse And Might Be Better.

"Things are never so bad but that they mightn't be worse," neither are things ever so good that they mightn't be better, but we all thought that the Southern farmer whose crops, reports are constantly telling us, have been frozen out or drowned out, was really in a condition that couldn't be worse, and deep sympathy was for the poor fellows struggling so hard against fate and doing their best to keep body and soul together. Now comes the Houston Post to remind us that things are seldom what they seem. It tells us that instead of fighting the wolf at the door the poor (?) farmer is living on the fat of the land, and it looks like things are so good they couldn't be better. Just listen to the mouthpiece of that land of milk and honey:

"The farmers of the great cotton region of Texas are offering as much as $2 a day and board for men to chop cotton and it seems that the supply of labor is inadequate at that price. These farm laborers who accept this employment, assuming them to be white, live at the homes of these planters and eat at their tables, which are loaded with such luxuries as the season affords, and no one doubts that Texas produces a greater range and abundance of farm luxuries than any State in the Union. What a man saves depends upon his common sense and thrift. But an industrious Ellis county cotton chopper may get up with the roosters in the morning and sit down to a breakfast consisting of cantaloupe, ham and eggs, mutton chops, buttermilk biscuits, fresh tomatoes, corn meal batter cakes and milk coffee. He goes into the field and works until noon. Then he has a dinner composed of soup, roast lamb, bacon and boiled cabbage, radishes, roasting ears, greens, asparagus, tomatoes, corn bread, buttermilk, strawberry pie, several forty-pound watermelons. He returns to the field and works until quitting time and then he has a supper composed of fried yellow-legged chicken, English peas, sliced tomatoes, hot hockcakes with Jersey butter, peach preserves, pie, buttermilk, coffee and fifty-pound watermelons. About 9 o'clock, after listening to the sweet music of the wild mocking bird can possibly make, he is supposed to rip into another watermelon as large as he likes and then retire."

Now the cruel Memphis Appeal remarks: "Great Scot! And everybody thought it was hog and hominy and mighty little of that. Oh, this thing needs investigation. Either the Houston Post is a promising candidate for somebody's Ananias club, or have these farmer men Munchausen beat a block."

All Good Democrats Getting In Line.

Circuit Judge R. Frank Peak, of Shelbyville, who, while being a straight Democrat has not been entirely in sympathy with the party leadership for several years, has made the announcement that he expects to take the stump for the State ticket this fall. He has offered his services to the State Democrat Campaign Committee and will be one of the first speakers assigned to duty. Judge Peak is one of the ablest campaign orators in the State, and is a great drawing card in a campaign. Judge Peak was identified with the Blackburn-McCreary wing of the party for several years, but he and Gov. Beckham are now staunch friends and the Judge is anxious to become more active in behalf of the State Democracy.

The Judge is like many other good Democrats who favored Blackburn and McCreary, but who are now ready to take off their coats for Democracy. Little sore at first, but when the bell sounds for them to enter the ring for the finish fight all good Democrats will be in good fighting condition. So here's to you Judge Peak.

Love for our heroic, warlike, peace-making President is so great in Russia, that one writer predicts that the name of that country will be changed "from plain Belle Russe to La Plus Belle Russevelt." The Russian bear under that name would certainly be a greater belle than the Teddy bear.

A Week Of Semi-Official Statements.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 20.—This week has been prolific of semi-official statements. Beveridge has been to Oyster Bay, and presumably with authority, announcing that "We" are not standing so awfully pat as some folks suppose. The statement Beveridge writes for the "World" is not as specific as the curious desire, but it announces that "natural causes" should be reasonable and avoid producing panic, just because it is found necessary to revise some scandalously oppressive schedules. The whole significance of this semi-official statement is that revision is accepted at Oyster Bay as an inevitable issue.

Then comes Bourke Cochran home from Nebraska, where he has seen Mr. Bryan. He repeats what so many who have seen Mr. Bryan lately know to be true; that is, that he is in doubt as to whether he will be a candidate or not. He thinks it is too soon to decide. These two great orators, according to the newspapers, spent their time in talking about the platform.

Finally, Norman E. Mack returns from abroad to report of fields and individuals beyond the pale of candidacy, and says that Richard Croker will return to the States, but only to vote. The hope expressed by Mr. Mack that Mr. Hearst and Mr. Bryan will, for the party good, make up their difference, has brought out the first explicit statement concerning the basis of the feud between these two gentlemen. None of Hearst's friends whom the New York newspapers sought would speak for publication, but it was learned that there is still a very pronounced ill feeling on the part of the Hearst people against Mr. Bryan, and the reason is given thus:

Mr. Hearst, in 1896 and 1900, personally through his newspaper, supported Mr. Bryan for the Presidency. In 1904 Mr. Bryan was not a candidate for the Presidency, while Mr. Hearst was, and Mr. Hearst felt that he should have Mr. Bryan's support. Instead of requiring the political loyalty of Mr. Hearst, Mr. Bryan went upon the platform and seconded the nomination of former United States Senator Cockerell, of Missouri, who had no chance of being nominated. Some of the Hearst people who were seen declared that Mr. Hearst's friends would do everything possible to defeat Mr. Bryan for the nomination next year, and that if they accomplished their purpose, Mr. Hearst would not run for President as the candidate for the National Independence League.

Peculiar significance is lent by these statements, which are admittedly inspired from Hearst sources, to Mr. Bryan's recent utterance concerning the Hearst Independent League, to the effect that "from a Socialistic standpoint, a third party will be unnecessary."

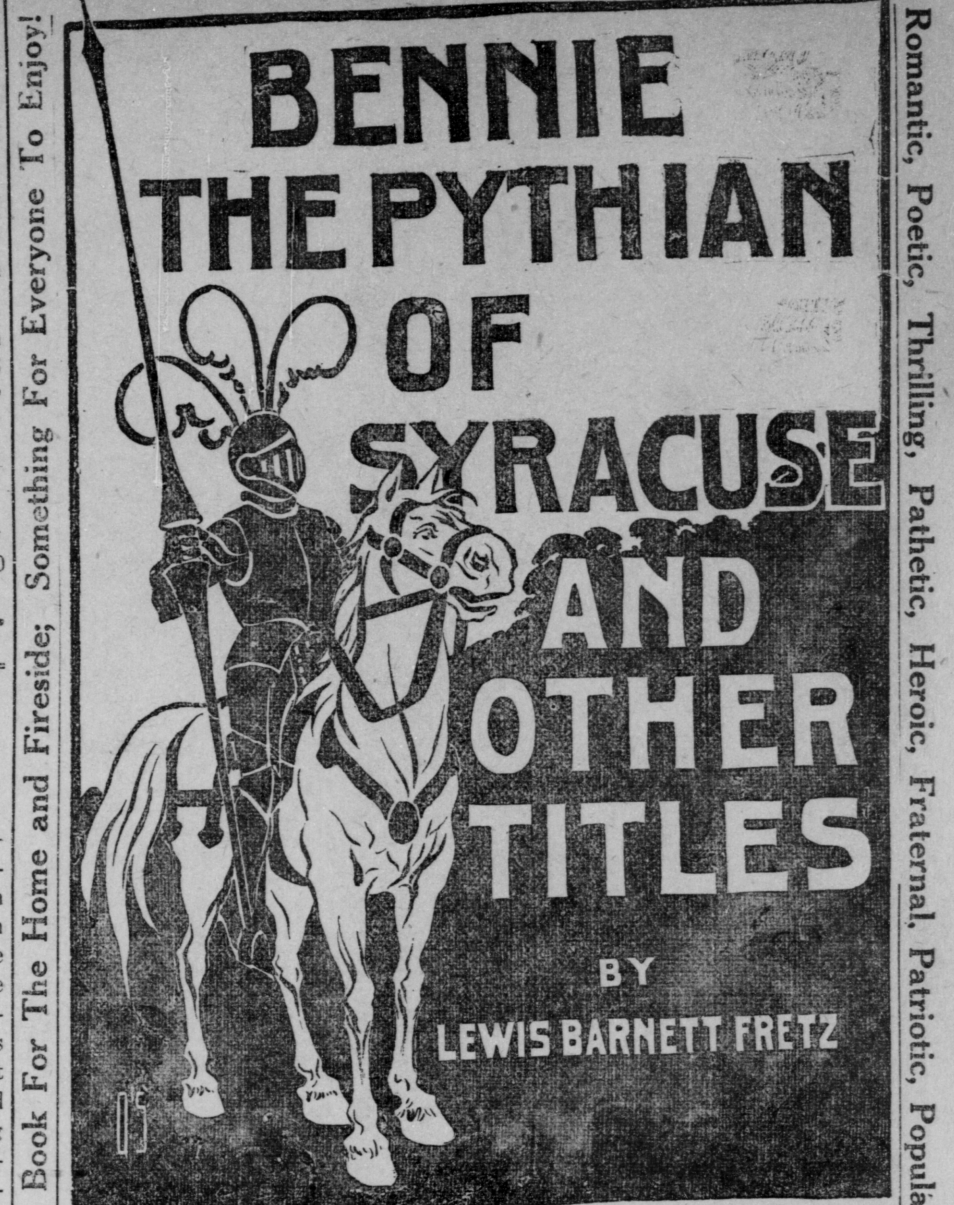

Neither the broad and charitable statesmanship which enlightening travel is supposed to produce, nor the chastening effects of defeat and repudiation, are apparent in this disclosure, and thoughtful Democrats are justified in wondering whether the promising party outlook is to be clouded by a personal rivalry, petty enough to do credit to a town meeting, and involving personal ambitions and no principles.

Some of the ignoble results of this quarrel between the candidates may be seen in the recent exposure of Mr. Bryan's undignified method of hanging around box offices and personally collecting and bestowing, in a bag carried for that purpose, the actual cash for his work as a lecturer, instead of having a clerk or a secretary do it.

While this and other small items of purely personal interest may be entertaining to groundlings and professors of department, they cannot contribute to a healthy public discussion about matters of principle.

Mr. Henry M. Whitney, of Boston, is making a great hit in his speaking campaign in Massachusetts for tariff reform, which is added to by the distinction heaped upon him from the White House of being the original member of the Ananias Club.

NOTHING JUST LIKE IT IN THE WORLD!

A Thrust At Taft.

The old Union soldiers and the negroes seem to be making common cause against Secretary Taft on the ground that he is the "heir apparent" of President Roosevelt. Former Lieutenant-Governor Lyons, of Ohio, a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and Joshua Jones, colored, President of the Wilberforce University, made speeches at Xenia, Ohio, recently, in which they voiced the sentiment of the classes to which they belong. Gov. Lyons said: "This country has never indulged in the heir-apparent theory, and is now too far advanced in Republicanism and Democracy to have any use for such a doctrine. I am in favor of Foraker because I want no man in Washington to represent me who has not a mind of his own, and I admire him the more if his judgment comes in conflict with the man with the big stick and he stands by his opinion."

President Jones, in a passionate speech, added: "I am a Christian and a minister of the gospel, but I want to say here that I damn those damned eliminators, Roosevelt and Taft, and all they stand for."

And yet they say there is harmony in the Republican camp. Why, the old cesspool is spouting hot mud like a geyser. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say, like two geysers.

Political Pick-Ups.

Mr. Bryan is reported to have said at Richmond that he would be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President, "if the party demanded it and if he considered it for the good of the party." A very sensible conclusion.

President Roosevelt has so far endorsed the Labor Unions' program for a shorter work day by advocating an eight-hour day for wives and mothers.

It will be to learn that the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice recommend, in the strongest terms possible, each and every ingredient entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the cure of weak stomach, dyspepsia, torpid liver, or biliousness, chronic bowel affections, and all catarrhal diseases of whatever region, name or nature. It is also a specific remedy for all such chronic or long standing cases of catarrhal affections and their results, as bronchitis, throat and lung disease (except consumption) accompanied with severe coughs. It is not so good for acute colds and coughs, but for lingering, or chronic cases it is especially efficacious in producing perfect cures. It contains Black Cherry bark, Golden Seal root, Bloodroot, Stone root, Mandrake root and Queen's root—all of which are highly praised as remedies for all the above mentioned affections by such eminent medical writers and teachers as Prof. Bartholow, of Jefferson Med. College; Prof. Hare, of the Univ. of Pa.; Prof. Finley, of Chicago; M. D. of Bennett Med. College, Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D. of Cincinnati; Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D. of Cincinnati; Prof. Edwin M. Hise, M. D. of Hahnemann Med. College, Chicago, and scores of others, equally eminent in their several schools of practice.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is the only medicine put up for sale through druggists for like purposes that has any such professional endorsement—worth more than any number of ordinary testimonials. Open publicity of its formula is the best possible guaranty of its merits. A glance at this published formula will show that "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no poisonous, harmful or habit-forming drugs and no alcohol—chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead. Glycerine is entirely unobjectionable and besides is a most useful agent in the cure of all stomach as well as bronchial, throat and lung affections. There is the highest medical authority for its use in all such cases. The "Discovery" is a concentrated glyceric extract of native, medicinal roots and is safe and reliable. A booklet of extracts from eminent medical authorities, endorsing its ingredients mailed free on request. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Bartered Bridegroom.

There are held here many "confidential weddings," as they are called when the ceremony is kept unusually quiet. But sometimes they are too confidential to please the relatives of the parties. The coercion of prospective brides under such circumstances is a proceeding well authenticated in fact and fiction. A kidnaped bridegroom, however, is unusual, though he happened at St. George's not long ago. He was a gentleman of position, and he wished to marry a lady who had nursed him through an illness. There was no cause or just impediment save social rank. The gentleman was determined, and the lady seconded his plans admirably. But the day and the details leaked out, and before the time fixed the bridegroom's male relatives deployed strategically through Maddox street and surrounded the church. He drove up in a hansom cab. With his eyes fixed on the expectant bride, he prepared to alight. An athletic uncle and a brother sprang forward, thrust him back, with a "Glad to meet you, old fellow" manner that deceived the cabman, who obeyed the quick direction he heard and drove the three away. The lady, with tears in her eyes, went into the vestry. "There will be no wedding," she said. "They've run away with him." And that was the last St. George's heard of them.—London Mail.

CAP AND THE CAT.

By Judson Welles.

Copyright, 1907, by Homer Sprague.

Hank Hinman sat on the front porch and gazed frankly and longingly across the neat fence to where Matie Forman worked in the garden and apparently gave him no heed. Hinman had yet to find that a woman may look north or south and yet be seeing east or west.

Matie very much approved of Hinman's attitude. The hunched up shoulders spoke eloquently of the good effect of her training. As a rule, those shoulders were accustomed to swagger, and it was the swagger to which Matie had objected. Just because they were engaged she did not concede his right to order her about, and the engagement had been broken.

Now that he was in this frame of mind she was quite willing to make up, but naturally to let the overture come from her would be a tactical error, and it did not look as though Hank would ever be enough himself again to make the first move. She was rather sorry for him and just a tiny bit contemptuous.

This might have been the end of the story had it not been for Miss Marsden's cat. Hank hated Miss Marsden, her cat and all else that was hers. Having failed to acquire a proprietary right to a man in her younger days, she was revenging herself upon the sex by leading the women's rights movement in Carrisdale.

It was she who had inculcated these advanced notions in Matie, and Hank cordially hated her for it. Captain Hank's dog, looked up, with wagging tail and appeal in his soft brown eyes. Hank nodded.

"Get her, Cap," he urged, but Captain needed no urging. With a yelp of delight he was off down the side of the plot. Susan (her full name was Susan B. Anthony) looked up to find retreat cut off. There were no trees in the Hinman front yard, and she made for the next lot. She scrambled through the wide set pickets, and Captain took the fence with a leap, landing against Matie, who was just planting a bulb. He precipitated her into the middle of the tulip bed. Then he dashed on in pursuit of the cat, now comfortably entrenched up an apple tree.

Hank sprang to Matie's rescue, but before he could leap the fence she had scrambled to her feet and was facing him, her face white with anger save for the red spots that glowed on either cheek.

"You set the dog on me," she declared, with a stamp of her foot. "I never thought that you could be so—"

"I didn't," defended Hank before she could find an adjective commensurate with the offense.

"You did," she contradicted. "I heard you. You said, 'Get her, Cap,' and then he—"

"Nothing of the sort," protested Hank hotly. "Old Miss Marsden's familiar spirit came over into my yard. Cap wanted a run, and I told him to get after her. She ran into your yard, and there she is now up a tree, just like her mistress should be."

Cap's canine entreaties to the cat to come down and be annihilated were too vociferous to be overlooked. Matie took a fresh tack.

"Anyhow," she sniffed, "you were cruel to dumb animals. That's bad enough."

"She's not a dumb animal," insisted Hank. "She's a demon in a cat's skin. I think she puts her mistress up to all these tricks."

"What tricks?" demanded Matie truculently.

"These women's rights things and all that. I heard her telling you the other night that it was traitorous to the cause to stand my bullying. I heard her. I wasn't bullying. I was telling you for your own good that Jim Sears was not a fit person for you to know."

"And because you think that she influenced me you are taking it out on a poor little kitten?"

"Kitten!" he scoffed. "She's no more a kitten than is Miss Marsden."

"We shall all be old some day," she reproved. "It is not Miss Emmy's fault."

"It's her fault that she's a meddling old maid," he persisted. It's her fault that she keeps a cat that is a thorn in the flesh of all her neighbors. "I love her," announced Matie just to be contrary. Hank whistled, and Cap came to his side, carefully picking out the walks in his approach.

"A love of cats is the second stage of splinterhood," he said stiffly. "If that's the way you are getting to feel I guess Cap and I had better be going home."

"You are perfectly hateful this morning," she pouted.

"That statement is beginning to look frayed on the edges," he reminded. "It is what you said last night, also day before yesterday."

"Well, you are," she repeated. "Here I was enjoying the nice morning, and you race your dog after a cat and spoil my flower beds. Then because I am naturally annoyed you tell me that I am a confirmed old maid."

"Only a second degree old maid," he reminded. "The third degree is corkscrew curls and a pointed chin. There is still hope for you."

"I am grateful that you concede anything," she said stiffly.

"I am nothing if not honest," he retorted.

"Not always," she insisted. "What you said about Jim Sears, for instance."

"He was arrested last night for running a dog fight last week. That was my kick. I knew about it when I spoke. Both dogs were killed."

"Perhaps you were right," she shuddered. "I didn't care about Jim Sears, but I did not like your dictatorial manner."

"Thanks to Miss Marsden," he contended. "I'll bet she told you that if you gave in before marriage you would encourage a tyrant husband."

"Who told you?" she asked quickly.

"No one. I just know how she talks. She knows everything about husbands except how to get one."

"It wasn't that I am guided by her," declared Matie, with a toss of her head. "But I think she was right. Anyhow, you had no right to take it out on the cat."

"But she kills my chickens."

"Susan? Impossible!"

"Impossible?" he echoed. "Why, she is the worst!"

The sentence was broken short, for with a growl Cap started for the fence, just in time to collar Susan, who was trying to slip through. There was a scurry, a howl and the cat lay dead on the grass.

With a cry of anger Matie sprang forward, Hank following more slowly. It was not like Susan to get caught in this fashion. Usually she could beat the ponderous Newfoundland. Then Matie, who had been stooping over the cat, straightened up and patted Cap's head.

"Good old dog," she praised. "Nice old fellow."

"What is it?" cried Hank, bewildered by the sudden change. She held out a little ball of yellow.

"I was cleaning Dicky's cage," she explained, "and left him out on the porch. That horrid brute knocked over the cage and killed him."

"So that's why she couldn't make her get away," he murmured. "I knew she was too fast for Cap."

"I'll call the bird Cap," she promised. "And there won't be any horrid cat to kill him."

He glanced at the solitary restored to her finger.

"And if Miss Marsden interferes we'll set Cap on her," he promised. "Come, Cap. Good old boy."

"Good old Cap," echoed Matie as she kissed the precious ring.

Early Pottery.

One of the principal territories of the potters for centuries was Kingte Chin, the finest pieces being made during the Ming dynasty. It is stated that the fine specimens were made with so much care that out of 200 pieces they would sometimes destroy 100. It is recorded in 1615 that a titled man in Japan had one of his attendants of rank whipped for breaking a cup and then sent to China at his own expense to buy another.

Protection For Swimmers.
"Cotton in the ears," said a physician, "should be used by all those who swim out beyond their depth. You know how often good swimmers of that type drown, don't you? Their drowning is imputed to cramp, but you will never find one of the drowned with his ears stuffed with cotton. Why? I'll tell you why. Because it isn't cramp that causes these drownings. It is a perforation of the eardrum, followed by unconsciousness, due to the pressure of the water. Cramp isn't, after all, the deadly thing it is made out to be. If you get a cramp in your leg while swimming it is easy enough to roll over on your back and float. The cramp won't kill you. But a perforation of the eardrum is different. It takes away your senses, and down you go like a log. So always, if you are going to do much swimming, stuff cotton in your ears."—New York Press.

Empty Longevity.

"Pa, Methuselah lived to be very old, didn't he?"

"Yes, my son, about 960 years, I believe; but, then, as far as I can learn, there was just about as much doing per year in those days as there is in five minutes now."—Watson's Magazine.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS

"No, Sir! You cannot palm off any substitutes on me. I've been using August Flower since I was a boy, and I'll have no other."

Forty million bottles of August Flower sold in the United States alone since its introduction! And the demand for it is still growing! Isn't that a fine showing of success? Don't it prove that August Flower has had unflinching success in the cure of indigestion and dyspepsia—the worst enemies of health and happiness? Does it not afford the best evidence that August Flower is a sure specific for all stomach and intestinal disorders—that it is the best of all liver regulators? August Flower has a matchless record of over 35 years in curing the ailing millions of these distressing complaints. Two sizes, 25c and 75c. All druggists.

Passengers Jump From Steamer

A terrific storm which partook of the nature of a whirlwind visited Henderson, Ky., and adjacent territory about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Many trees, chimneys and wires were blown down there.

Two hundred people had a narrow escape on board the Jewel, an excursion steamer which was blown into the Kentucky shore three miles above Henderson.

Ninety-five per cent. of the excursionists jumped from the second deck to the shore, a height of 20 feet. One colored woman broke her left leg below the knee and a white woman was injured by being caught between the boat and the shore. The boat was blown against the shore with such force that the deck was covered several inches deep with dirt.

Editor's Wife Dies.

Mrs. Mary Atkinson Moore, aged 38 years, wife of Paul M. Moore, editor and publisher of the Earlington Bee, and daughter of John B. Atkinson, president of St. Bernard Mining Company and president of the Kentucky Jamestown Commission, passed away after a long illness of Bright's disease. The funeral took place from the family residence yesterday morning at 9 o'clock. The interment was at Grapevine cemetery, near Earlington.

When we want to read something particularly funny we pick up some "household magazine" and read an article on "how to build a modest cottage for $6,000," or peruse the "menus for the month," written especially for "workingmen." The average workingman who tried to follow out one of these "menus for the month" would find his monthly salary exhausted about Thursday of the first week.

Airship Engaged.

The Blue Grass Fair Association has closed a contract for a Knabenshue airship to make daily ascensions during the Fair. This contract was made last week, after a full consideration of all the different airship propositions of the country. The Knabenshue ship was chosen because in its demonstrations of the practicability of aerial navigation, Mr. Roy Knabenshue himself will come to the Fair to make the ascents, and there is no doubt that his flights will be most successful provided weather conditions are not absolutely adverse. When it is raining it is of course not possible to fly an airship, nor can a satisfactory flight be made when a high wind prevails. Under any other circumstances, however, the flights can be carried out, and on each day of the Fair some two or three exhibitions will be given at different periods, so that all who come may have the opportunity to witness them. An aerodrome tent will also be provided wherein the ship will be kept when not making its ascents. In this tent will be a demonstrator who will explain every detail, and thus visitors will be given opportunity both to see the ship in motion and to examine it at their leisure. The Knabenshue airship will be the big feature of the Blue Grass Fair every day from August 12th to 17th inclusive.

Won His Own Case.

A novel, interesting trial was disposed of in Judge Dundon's court yesterday, in which the defendant a rugged laborer on the farm of Thos. Henry Clay, came out victorious, pleading his own case.

The principals in the litigation were Thos. Morris of this city, and James Feedback residing on the farm of R. M. Harris. Mr. Harris leased his farm to Ed. Grace, who later sold his contract to Morris. Grace contracted with Feedback to cultivate the crop but a difference arose between the latter and his new landlord, Feedback ceasing to further comply with his agreement. Morris sought possession of the house occupied by Feedback but the latter would not surrender the premises, with the result that Morris swore out a forcible detainer, the writ being returnable before Judge Dundon. The case went to trial with Judge Russell Mann representing the plaintiff, the defendant pleading his own case as above stated. Feedback surprised the spectators with his knowledge of legal lore, making his own statement before the jury, interrogating the plaintiff and his witnesses, and introducing his own witnesses in the order in which their testimony would appear to the best advantage. The jury in their verdict found for the defendant.

Cantrill Cutting Wheat.

The first wheat harvest of the season in Central Kentucky began Saturday on the farm of Senator Campbell Cantrill, of Scott County. In spite of the frequent rains and cold weather of last month the wheat throughout Central Kentucky is in good condition, and the not weather of the last two weeks killed the rust that begun to make its appearance in the field. The harvest will be in progress in earnest this week and most of the wheat will be in the shock by July 1.

Eugene Tune Killed By Train.

Eugene Tune, a bridge carpenter on the L. & N. R. R. was run over at Covington, Sunday night and instantly killed at Covington. Young Tune went to Cincinnati on the excursion train Sunday morning. As the excursion train was pulling into the Covington depot from Cincinnati, Tune ran across the street to catch the excursion train to return home when he was run down by a freight train on another track. He was horribly mangled, being cut in two, his head being severed from his body. He was a son of Wm. Tune, of Carlisle, and well spoken of by all who knew him. His remains passed through this city last evening enroute to Carlisle for interment.

The way to make a friend of a man is to listen with sympathetic ear when he tells you that he is just recovering from the worst case of sickness his family doctor ever handled.

Every spring the officials of the Bourbon Bank have the stone that is in front and the side of their handsome banking house cleaned at considerable expense. This has been done for several years in succession and the young scamps that make this their business should be detected and severely punished. If there is anything that Paris does need, it is a curfew ordinance.

Paris A Moral Town.

By looking over the indictments made by the recent Grand Jury it will be seen that not a single indictment brought in was for gaming or for violating of the liquor laws. It was the same way at the March term of Court and yet there are some who would have you believe that Paris is the worst town in Kentucky, when in fact, it is the best town in Kentucky from any standpoint you take it.

Paris, however, is like every other town, it has a few old sanctimonious hypocrites who can't see the good in any thing and continually grumbling.

Jock's Li'l' Boy.

By FRANK H. SWEET.

Copyright, 1906, by Frank H. Sweet.

"I CAN'T let you off now, Jock," I expostulated impatiently. "These lines must be run by Saturday, and you're the best chopper I have. Can't you wait till next week?"

Jock looked down at me a little reproachfully, I thought.

"It's blegged to go, boss," he said decisively. "I done tole yo' my li'l' boy's wuss. Mar'get's Tobe jes' fotched me de news. I'd like pow'ful to he'p yo' all, but I jes' cayn't, don't yo' see?"

"Very well," I answered irritably as I opened my pocketbook and began to count out the money due him, "only don't come whining around after more work. I can't be forever taking on new hands and teaching them the ropes. I want men who will stand by me."

I spoke rather more vehemently than I meant to, but I liked Jock and was very unwilling to have him go. He had been with me only a few weeks, but was already worth any two men I had. Considerably over six feet in height and strong and massive in proportion, he was at once fertile in expedients and perfectly obedient to orders.

I was thinking regretfully of Jock's departure as I turned my instrument around and sighted back over the line. Everything was all right, and I signaled the rear man to come forward. As I took out my field book to make some notes I was conscious of a light touch on my shoulder.

"What—not gone yet?" I asked.

"No, boss. I cayn't go disaway. If I ain't come back no mo' I don't wan' yo' t'ink ob me as no 'count nigger. I jes' blegged to go."

"Oh, that's all right," I answered, a little ashamed of my ill temper. "You needn't mind what I said about not coming back. I was out of sorts. If I have a place, I shall be glad to take you on any time."

The black face cleared instantly.

"Thank yo', boss! Thank yo', sah! I like yo' all's wuk. Yo'se de bes' boss I's had, 'cep'n' de doctor."

I slipped the field book into my pocket and sat down upon a stump.

"Who is this doctor you are forever talking about, Jock?" I asked. "I am getting curious about him."

Jock's face became grave once more. I fancied I could see tears glistening in his eyes.

"He's de bes' man dat eber lib, sah—de berry bes' man de good Gawd eber made. I been his body sarbent for ten year an' wuk for him an' watch ober him an' nuss him. I watch him so I almos' know wa' he t'ink 'bout. He didn't hab no fo'ks nowhars, an' he uster say dat I war his'n's family. He tuk me in de wood wa' he hunt bugs an' t'ings, an' he tuk me in de city wa' he wuk for de pore fo'ks."

"How came you to leave him?"

"I didn't leave him, sah; he done lef' me. De good Gawd tuk him. W'en

"I WANT MEN WHO WILL STAND BY ME," de yaller fever bruk out, he wuk night an' day, lak he allers do. Mos' eberybody git outen de city, but de pore fo'ks had to stay, an' de doctor an' nusses hatter stay to look arter 'em. Dr. Halton stin' it for seben week; den he tuk de fever an' die."

"Dr. Halton?" I exclaimed. "That name sounds familiar."

"Co'se it do, sah. De papers was full ob it. De doctor was a rich man, an' he done gib bofe his life an' money to de cause. I reckon de whole world done hern 'bout him. He wuk night an' day, all de time, an' nebbet t'ought ob res'."

"And you remained with him through it all?" I asked.

"Ob co'se!" Jock answered simply. "De doctor 'lowed I was good he'p. I was big an' strong an' could wuk roun' an' li'l' de sick fo'ks."

"And you didn't catch the fever?"

"No, sah!" showing his teeth a little. "I reckon dis nigger's skin too t'ick for fever git roun'. W'en de doctor die I had no wuk, so I nuss roun' till de winter come an' brek de fever. Den I pick up all de doctor's t'ings. Yo' see, his voice growing low and tremulous, "de doctor done tole me sell eberyting he hab lef' an' buy me a li'l' home somewhere. I git fo' hun'erd dollars an' come up disaway. Yo' know?"

I nodded. I had often seen and admired Jock's little vine covered cottage and wondered at his exquisite taste in shrubs and flowers. On one occasion I had met him walking back and forth, crooning some strange African melody to a pitiful mite of humanity in his arms. Perhaps this was the "li'l' boy" he was so fond of.

"How old is your little boy?" I asked.

"Dunno, sah. Reckon he's a heap ol'er'n his size on 'count o' bein' twist-ed. Yo' see, boss, it didn't 'pear jes' right for me to use de doctor's money for myself. Seemed lak it orter go to de pore fo'ks, lak de res' ob his fortune. But dar' war de orders. So I buys de house an' den hunts roun' an' fin's de skimpin' bit ob pickaninny I kin—one dat ain't de leastes' able to keef for himself—an' sets out to raise him. My ole mammy come lib wid me an' look arter t'ings. Den ebery summer I goes down to de city an' brings up a whole passle ob young uns outen de street an' gib's 'em a good time. Dar's plenty ob meyluns an' sweet taters an' gyarden truck roun' my place, an' I takes 'em out huntin' an' fishin'."

"I 'lows dey done enjy it from de way dey 'pr'jec' roun'." Jock threw back his head and laughed heartily at the recollection of some of their projecting. Then he suddenly became grave.

"Does yo' know, boss," he continued solemnly, "it 'pears mighty strange to me sometimes, lak as ef de Lawd's han' war in it? Dat pore li'l' pickaninny w'at I 'lows to be de runtles' in de whole worl' is tu'nin' out to be sompin' stromery. He c'n play de fiddle lak a born musician, an' for de banjo an' flute, laws, it brings out de tears jes' ter li's'n. Does yo' know, boss," abruptly, "w'at I's wukin' up hyer for?"

"To earn some money, I suppose," I answered, laughing.

"Dat's hit prezac'ly. But I ain't need no money for housekeepin'. I raise gyarden truck an' chickens an' t'ings, an' I go fishin' an' huntin'. No, sah! I's git'n' money for dat li'l' boy's musicianin'. He's plumb 'stracted 'bout an' orgin. I's been totin' him up to Mis' Hun'erd's lately so't he mount li's'n to her playin', an' fer a fac', sah, dat li'l' boy'd jes' cock his head on one side while she played a chune, den he'd climb up on dat stool an' play de same chune frou, ebery dot an' skiver prezac'."

Mis' Hun'erd say 'twar truly 'stonishin'. Yes, sah, dat boy's gwyne hab an' orgin, an' I'm gwine hab him learn play jes' lak white fo'ks, off'n paper."

At this moment the rear man came up and stood waiting for orders. Jock ducked his head and was turning away when I called him back. Unclasping the glittering chain from my watch, I handed it to him.

"Give it to the little boy," I said, "and tell him it is from one of his daddy's friends."

Jock's face grew fairly radiant. A present for himself would not have given him half the pleasure.

The next week my chief sent instructions for me to repair to Terrebonne and survey some swamp land. I had been there before and knew the place well. In winter it would not have been so bad, but now! I crushed the brief note impatiently in my hand.

But there was no help for it, so we set about breaking camp. The next day we were ready for departure.

As we stood on the platform of the little way station waiting for the train I saw the big, well known figure of Jock hurrying up the track. In a few minutes he was beside me.

"Clar' for it, boss, I war feared I wouldn't catch up," he panted. "I's mos' run de bref outen me."

I welcomed him heartily. His broad shoulders and knowledge of woodcraft would be invaluable in that out of the way place. The terms of his service were quickly arranged, and then I asked him about the little boy.

"I dunno for shore, yet, sah," he said gravely. "De doctor 'low he war in a bad fix an' better be sent up norf to a gran' hospital. He 'low de boy cayn't nebbet be raised lak he is, but dat mebbe de big doctors mout unwinn' de twistes an' fix him up lak under boys. Ef dey do dat," with a rare smile, "I'll sho t'ank de good Gawd all de res' ob my life."

"It will be very expensive," I ventured.

"Yes, sah; so de doctor tole me. He 'low he'd ax Jedge Hun'erd to he'p some, but I done stop dat," throwing his head back proudly. "I don't ax no he'p long's I c'n he'p myself. De li'l' boy's mine, an' I's de one to tak car' ob him." Then, with a light quaver in his voice, he added abruptly, "I done sol' de house an' pigs an' t'ings."

"Why, that's too bad!" I exclaimed involuntarily. "Wasn't there any other way?"

"No, sah, an' de house an' t'ings didn't fotch quite enuf. De li'l' boy'l' hatter be thar mos' a year, an' doctor's stuff an' nussin' 'cos' a heap. I done hire a room for my ole mammy an' will sen' her sompin' ebery mont'. All de res' mus' go to de hospital. I splained it to de doctor an' 'lowed he'd fix it all right."

"So you have already sent the boy?"

"Yes, sah; de doctor done sent a nuss wid him res'day."

It was night when we reached Thibodeau. The next day we purchased provisions and set out for the scene of our labors. Three months later I received instructions to cross over into Texas. It was spring before we returned to Florida.

One day Jock burst into my tent with an open letter in his hand.

"He's done cured," he cried radiantly, "all de twistes an' disjints tuk outer him! He's a-comin' home now, walkin' from de cyars lak udder boys. Glory to de Lam'! But sense me, boss," lowering his voice suddenly, "I's tickled clean frou. I reckon yo'll hatter femme off a few days, sah. I nuss' see dat li'l' boy."

"Of course! But will you come back?"

"Suttin'ly, sah. I mus' wuk right peart now an' mek heaps ob money. Dar's dat boy's orgin, an' dar's dat house I'm a-gwyne to buy back. Yes, sah, I'll mos' shorely come back."

A week later he returned, bringing a basket of fresh lettuce and radishes as a welcome addition to our camp table.

"How about the boy?" I asked.

Jock's face shone, and yet under the joy I fancied I could detect a trace of uneasiness.

"He jes' de same lak udder boys now," he answered, "widout no misery nor crookedness to his walk an' only jes' pale an' skimpy from de hospital an' de pain. He say de doctor tell him to stay outdoor all dis summer an' wuk easy an' slow an' den he be puf-fectly well, an' den"—Jock broke off abruptly and busied himself for some minutes in sprinkling the green tops of his vegetables, then added, "I done hire de li'l' home back, an' my ole mammy an' de boy's dar' now."

"HE'S DONE CURED!" HE CRIED RADIANTLY.

"That is fine!" I exclaimed in genuine pleasure. "With the boy's help you will soon be able to buy the place again."

Jock shook his head.

"I done gib dat all up now, boss," he said gravely. "Dar's mo' 'portant t'ings den jes' ownin' a house an' some groun'. I rent it dis summer on 'count de boy bein' outdoor an' likin' de place. But nex' fall my ole mammy say she stert to take in washin', an' she an' me gwine wuk harder'n we eber done befo'. Dar'll be need for mo' money, an' she say she ain't too ole to he'p mak' it."

I suppose I looked puzzled, for Jock added quickly:

"It's de musicianin'. T'ings like dat when dey's plumb bilin' inside is blegged to come out, I reckon. Dar was an' orgin an' planner bofe to de hospital, an' dat boy's fingers jes' natchally foun' de way to 'em. An' de first time, I reckon, was 'fore he could walk, for I heered him tell my ole mammy dat de doctor li'l' him off de stool an' tote him back to his bald."

But de nex' day he crawl off dar ag'in some way, an' in de end de doctors hab to gib in. When he start home all cure up, dey tell him to wuk outdoor dis summer an' git strong an' den come back an' dey'll fix up 'bout his musicianin'."

Jock drew himself to his full height with unconscious dignity as he added: "But de li'l' boy's mine, an' I's gwine fix up 'bout all dat. If he's stromery, lak de doctor say, I's de one to pay for all dat readin' off paper study, but if he wa'n' stromery it wouldn't mek no dif'rence. He wants it, an' I's bound to get it for him."

"If he becomes a good musician, Jock," I ventured, "he will soon be able to do something for himself and perhaps to help you."

"He's a black boy," said Jock gravely. "Cep'n' for dat he mout."

During the next two years I heard occasional reports of the boy's progress through Jock, and once I found an item in a newspaper about the part he took in a concert. This I gave to Jock, who hid it away among his other treasures. The third year we were down at the extreme end of Florida, working on the extension of a railroad to Key West. Jock had been with me all this time, untiring, devoted and, I might almost add, indispensable. One day he received a letter from his boy and brought it to me with an expression of mingled delight and incredulity.

"What yo' t'ink, boss," he said in an awed voice, "dat pickaninny's started out for hissef, an' he's done sen' me a check for six hun'erd dollar an' write dat it's for jes' fo' weeks' wuk playin' chunes. He say for me to buy de li'l' home back an' den me an' my ole mammy come an' lib 'long ob him an' hab eberyting in dis wide worl' dat we want. He gwyne mek money right along now."

"I told you"—I began, when Jock waved the unspoken words aside.

"Pears lak dis am de doctor's money," he said, still in the awed voice, "an' it's for me to keep de money wukin'. I's gwyne take de six hun'erd an' hunt out mo' skimpy pickaninnyes an' fotch dem up to de bes' t'ings de worl' hab to gib."

"But the house?"

"I's gwyne git dat, too," a little catch coming into his voice. "De boy ain't need my he'p no mo', an' I's too strong to gib up wuk yet an' res'. My ole mammy an' me gwine wuk an' buy de li'l' home back now, an' den we bring mo' runty pickaninnyes to lib 'long ob us. An' mebbe de boy'll come home to spen' his vacationin'. Glory to de Lam'!"

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials. Address: F. J. Forests' Unnatural Death.

The life of nearly all forests is cut short by fire or by the hand of the lumberman. When a spruce forest is entirely destroyed by fire young spruces do not at once spring up and cover the burned area. The seed bearing cones have been burned, and the spores and seeds of other plants which are readily carried by the wind find their way in first. The task of preparing for the forest is begun again, but this time it is to be a shorter one. The first year after the fire mosses and often tiny flowering plants appear. These are replaced by the fireweed and other flowers whose seeds are provided with hairs so that they reach such places quickly. These are soon joined by raspberries, roses and other bushes. Among these the young seedlings of aspens appear in a very few years. The latter grow rapidly and in a score of years form a low sunny forest. An aspen forest makes a brilliant contrast with the dark green forests of spruce.—St. Nicholas.

Origin of Ascot Races.

When did Ascot races begin? They are mentioned in the first "Racing Calendar," published in 1727, and the usual statement is that they were founded by the Duke of Cumberland, uncle of George III. But an entry in the accounts of the master of the horse in 1712 suggests that they were founded by Queen Anne on Aug. 6, 1711. The truth, no doubt, is that Ascot races, like many other august institutions, gradually developed from a germ, so that it is difficult to say when they really began. At any rate, they were quite the sort of thing that enthusiasts of the turf, Queen Anne, would have founded. She was a thorough Stuart in this passion. It was her great-grandfather, James I., who encouraged, if he did not establish, horse racing in Scotland and popularized it in England.—London Chronicle.

THANKS TO THE METER.

By James Clegg.

Copyright, 1907, by M. M. Cunningham.

"Please, have you a quarter?"

The girl from across the hall held out a tiny hand, in the palm of which were displayed three nickels and a dime.

Keenly conscious that there was a hole, a most comfortable and satisfactory hole, in the elbow of his smoking jacket, Digby held out his own hand, unclosing his fingers to display the desired coin.

"Did you know what I was coming after?" she said, with a laugh. Digby had never heard her laugh before. It was a low, rippling laugh, almost as attractive as her smile. He wondered how he could improve his opportunity. Ever since she had moved in he had wanted to know the girl across the hall. Had his mother been home it would have been all simpler, but he had been keeping bachelor hall for nearly three months.

"Did you know I wanted the quarter?" she repeated. Digby pulled himself together. "I am a seventh son," he declared solemnly. "I know that you want the quarter. I can see you returning to your apartment. I can see you climbing on a chair and dropping the coin into the gas meter. I can see the light growing bright again. Great is the automatic meter—when you have a quarter."

"Yes, when?" she cried. "The other day we only had a check, and no one could cash it."

"Say no more," he commanded tragically. "I know the rest."

"I'm very much obliged," she said gratefully. "You are sure you won't need one?"

"Not at all," he assured. As though to prove him false the gas in his hall grew dim. "I have more change," he explained, "and it's all right."

He watched her regretfully as she slipped back into her own apartment. He had planned many brilliant encounters in which he would hold her enthralled by his wit, and they would live happily ever after. Instead he had never been so dull, and perhaps he had lost his chance.

The gas had gone out as he closed the door and limped into the kitchen. He knew very well that it was useless to search for a quarter. He had found the one he had just given up only after a search. He would have to fall back on candles. There were half a dozen in the dining room, and by lighting four he managed to read after a fashion.

But he had scarcely settled himself to his reading when the doorbell rang again. He wondered who it might be now as he made his way down the dark hall. The girl across the hall stood there again.

"You fibbed," she said reproachfully. "You said you had another quarter for yourself. You let me drop yours in our meter, and we can see across the shaft that you're using candles."

"I rather like them," he assured, but she would have none of it.

"You were just going to drop the coin in your meter," she cried. "That is why you had it in your hand."

In the face of deduction he was dumb. The girl went on:

"I know you can't go downstairs to get change because you hurt your ankle. It wouldn't be any use anyway. It's Sunday, and only the drug store is open, and they are all out of quarters. I was down there just before I asked you for one. Mother says you must come in to our flat and read. You may smoke all you like. We don't mind it in the least."

"I am very comfortable," he protested.

The opportunity he had longed for had come, and he was too bashful to avail himself of it. In the end the girl in her masterful little way carried her point. Presently he was installed in the pleasant parlor and was telling motherly Mrs. Fallows all about his trials without his mother.

"It must be so lonesome for you," she cried. "Why didn't you come to us long ago?"

"I've wanted to," he admitted frankly. "Sometimes I've seen the light, and I've been so homesick. We only moved here just before my grandmother's illness took mother west, and I never got acquainted with any one. All of our friends live on the other side of town."

"We come from the country, where we are used to being neighbors," she explained. "I want you to feel that you are welcome here any time."

There was a sincerity in her tones that brought a genial glow to Digby's heart, and the girl (he knew now her name was Ethel) seconded her mother with a glance.

That night was but the beginning of a new life for Digby. The following evening he brought home a box of candy as a return courtesy and was invited to spend the evening, so gradually he fell into the habit of dropping in after dinner. There were trips to the theater, little excursions on Sunday, and even when he had word from his mother that she had decided to remain west for the summer he did not offer objection.

The more he was with Ethel the more deeply in love he became. He had never known many women, and this charming girl was the first he had ever loved. Often he would declare to himself that he would propose, but each time his courage failed him.

Then one night came the climax. The gas began to flicker and burn low, and Ethel left the room to drop in the coin that would turn on the flow again. He heard a match strike in the kitchen, where the gas had not been lit, then came an explosion, and he rushed down the narrow hall.

In some fashion the meter had sprung a leak, and the lighted match had caused the ignition of the gas. Ethel, her light gown ablaze, came staggering blindly toward him. He had his coat off before they met and threw it about her shoulders, forcing her to the carpet that the blaze might not be able to gain headway toward her face. The gas in the apartment had been extinguished, and he was forced to work in the dark, but he beat out the flames with his hand and then rushed into the kitchen to check the flow of gas.

It was easy to extinguish the flames there and shut off the gas at the inlet. Then he opened the doors from their apartment to his and bore her in his arms to his mother's room. Mrs. Fallows followed and took charge of the girl while he went for the doctor.

It was some hours later that he was permitted to see Ethel. She had asked for him, her mother said, and he stole gently into the room. She put out her uninjured hand and smiled at him. In some miraculous fashion her face had not been touched by the flames, though her masses of golden hair were crisp and blackened.

"It was awfully brave of you, Ben," she whispered as he bent over her. "When that explosion came the first thing I thought was that I was so glad that you were there. I knew you would help me. The doctor says you saved my life by putting the fire out so quickly."

"Any one could have done it," he protested, "but I'm glad it was I."

"So am I," she answered.

"I'd like to be around all the time, if you'll let me," he went on in sudden bravery.

"I was afraid you were getting to look on me more as a sister," she said as the blood came slowly into her cheeks. "Are you sure, Ben, that it's not just because of the accident?"

"The accident has nothing to do with it," he protested, "except that the thought of how I might have lost you gave me the courage to speak."

"I think," she smiled faintly, "that we ought to be very grateful to that gas meter. That's how I first met you, you remember."

History of Ivory.

The earliest recorded history—we might say prehistoric, the hieroglyphical—that has come down to us has been in carvings on ivory and bone. Long before metallurgy was known among the prehistoric races carvings on reindeer horn and mammoth tusk evidence the antiquity of the art. Fragments of horn and ivory engraved with excellent pictures of animals have been found in caves and beds of rivers and lakes. There are specimens in the British museum, also in the Louvre, of the Egyptian skill in ivory carving attributed to the age of Moses. In the latter collection are chairs or seats of the sixteenth century B. C. inlaid with ivory and other pieces of the eleventh century B. C. Carving of the "precious substance" was extensively carried on at Constantinople during the middle ages. Combs, caskets, horns, boxes, etc., of carved ivory and bone, often set in precious stones, of the old Roman and Anglo-Saxon periods are frequently found in tombs.

An Eskimo Legend.

Among the Eskimos, the angakos or sorcerer who would visit Sedna, the goddess who lives underground or in the depths of the ocean, presiding over one of the countries to which souls go after death, must first pass the arisut—the dwellings of the happy dead—and then cross an abyss in which a wheel as slippery as ice is constantly turning round. Arriving at the house of Sedna, he finds it guarded by terrible animals, sometimes described as seals, and sometimes as dogs, and when within the house passage he has to cross an abyss by means of a bridge as narrow as a knife edge.

Keeping Up Appearances.

The tall man in the suit of faded black went into the first class restaurant and seated himself at a table in a far corner. Lingered there a minute or two, he rose stiffly and went to the cashier's desk. "If a gentleman can't be waited on promptly in this place," he said, with a frown, "there are plenty of other places." Then he strolled leisurely out, picking his teeth, and presently wended his way unobtrusively to the five cent lunch counter around the corner.—Chicago Tribune.

Money and Kisses.

A man living for the time being in Columbus and who is in the habit of giving his wife a generous roll of bills the first day of every month for her pin money complained the other day that she owed him $2.80 for acting as her caddy while on the golf links during a visit to the sunny south. She demurred, but asked if he would be willing to take the pay in kisses. Although a Benedict of long standing, he still adores his wife, and he agreed to this method of payment.

While they were at breakfast on the first day of the following month he drew out his pocketbook and began counting out various bills of large denomination, while she, with hand outstretched, waited eagerly for the roll, remarking that her last month's allowance was all spent.

"Wait a moment," he said. "I believe I'll give you kisses instead." And the money was stuffed back in his pocket, much to her dismay.

It is only fair to say, however, that later she received both money and kisses.—Columbus Dispatch.

Too Low!

A well known sportsman had become very tired of listening to a series of shooting yarns that some friends had been spinning. At last he launched his first and only story that night. "I went into a field one day to have a shot," he said. "The only game in sight was an immense flock of blackbirds. I should say there were 10,000 in the flock. I fired both barrels, and how many do you think I killed?" Different guesses were made, ranging from twenty to a hundred birds. "Not one," said the stranger, "but I went out to look for results and picked up thirty bushels of legs. I had shot a little too low."—Tatler.

Keen Sense of Humor.

"There is nothing like a sense of humor," said a naval officer, according to the Philadelphia Bulletin. "In a woman, in a soldier, in a sailor, in a clerk, a sense of humor is a help and a blessing through life. At the same time even a sense of humor may exist in excess. I, for my part, shouldn't care to have so great a sense of humor as a British soldier I once heard about. This soldier was ordered to be flogged. During the flogging he laughed continually. The lash was laid on all the harder, but under the rain of blows the soldier laughed.

"What are you laughing at?" the sergeant finally asked.

"Why," the soldier chuckled, "I'm the wrong man."

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

"Let Me Down Easy."

There was all kinds of excitement at a negro funeral near Denton, Md., Sunday when Samuel Johnson, a negro ventriloquist, threw his voice into the grave as the casket was being lowered and said: "Let me down easy." The mourners thought it was the corpse that spoke and with a scream they fled. The pallbearers were so frightened they dropped the casket. When the relatives recovered their composure they accused Johnson of exercising his "talents" and forthwith had him arrested. He was given a hearing on a charge of disorderly conduct and malicious mischief and was held in bail. The ventriloquist is from Wilmington. He says he will never again give a performance in a cemetery.
